OPPORTUNITIES TO SUBMIT PUBLIC COMMENTS

On July 20th, a draft of the Independent Risk Analysis for the Straits Pipeline was released, which will provide information and data to assist the State of Michigan in future decisions about the Straits pipelines. The report can be accessed in its entirety on the Michigan Petroleum Pipelines website, www.mipetroleumpipelines.com.

A 30-day public comment period on the report led by Michigan Tech University opened July 20th and will end on August 19, 2018. This is your chance to improve the report that will serve as a basis for future decisions on Line 5 at the Straits.

Comments should focus on the following:

1. Clarity: Are any parts of the report confusing and need clarification?
2. Data: Are there any sources of information that should have been included that were not?
3. Completeness: Upon review of the report, did the contractor fail to cover a key topic? If something was left out, was the reason for doing so addressed and is the reasoning sufficient for the exclusion?
4. Methodology: Was the methodology understandable or does more information need to be given? Is it sufficient to accurately address the questions presented? Are there any flaws in the methodology used?
5. Cost: Are all cost components identified, or is there a category of costs that were not considered?
6. Report Assumptions: Are the assumptions in the report realistic? Are they explained well?
